I live at Windsor NSW and within the family home we have 4 analogue TV's. On one of those TV's we have a digital Top Box Set. You may wish to know why I have not and will not soon be going digital.

Firstly I see no decernable benefit at this time to go digital. In this area the Top Box Set pixilates to often now to use it on a regular basis. It is my understanding that this also happens to digital in this area.

Secondly, I don't see any advantage in having 4 digital TV's in a house where 2 of the sets are rarely used , viz Main Bedroom and outdoor entertaining area.

Thirdly, some of my friends who have digital have basically told me that the only advantage is the differing shots you can bring up on a sporting event but those shots don't correspond with the sound track. Doesn't appeal in any way.

Lastly, we have satelite Pay TV and we already have enough choice to keep the family happy.

At this point I will be very disappointed to be forced to change my present arrangment in say 2008.
