EXTRACT OF RECOMMENDATIONS

Members' and Senators' Entitlements

The Committee recommends:

That, from the commencement of the 36th Parliament, Members of Parliament be entitled to receive Hansard bound volumes of the House in which they have served, covering their period in office, and that these volumes be provided automatically.

Official Free Distribution List

The Committee recommends:

That entitlement to receive bound volumes of Hansard be determined according to the following guideline:

That, unless the Presiding Officers otherwise determine, the National Library of Australia, all State and State Parliamentary Libraries, and a country's national or parliamentary library with an exchange arrangement with the National Library of Australia, be eligible to receive one free set of bound volumes of Hansard upon request.

That tertiary institutions, upon request, be entitled to receive an additional set of the weekly volumes of Hansard, together with sessional indexes and information pages, to facilitate self binding of those volumes should those organisations wish to do so.

That the number of half calf volumes produced be reduced to 5 and distribution be restricted to the Presiding Officers, the Chambers and the Parliamentary Library.

That bound volumes be provided to the party leaders in each House.

That the parliamentary departments take action to reduce the number of sets of bound volumes currently being received.

Subscriptions

The Committee recommends:

That the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff investigate the feasibility and desirability of producing Hansard in media forms other than paper.

That subscribers to Hansard bound volumes be charged a fee as determined by the Presiding Officers, representing the cost of production and distribution of each volume.

Stored Sets

The Committee recommends:

That, contingent on the adoption of the above recommendations, the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff reassess the need to retain 30 sets of bound volumes in store.

DISTRIBUTION OF BOUND VOLUMES OF HANSARD

Conduct of inquiry

1. On 12 May 1989 the Presiding Officers wrote to the Joint Committee on Publications requesting it to inquire into and report on the distribution of Hansard bound volumes with particular reference to:

- . the desirability of providing bound volumes to Members and Senators upon request rather than automatically;
- . the desirability of those on the official distribution list being asked to pay a subscription fee and the subscription fee being raised to cost recovery plus 10% (ie. printing, binding and distribution);
- . a review of the number of bound volumes being prepared for store; and
- . the savings which would accrue to the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff if these requirements were implemented.

2. At a meeting held on 1 June 1989 the Committee resolved to accept the reference and the Presiding Officers were advised accordingly.

3. Submissions were sought and received from the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff (Hansard) and the Australian Government Publishing Service (AGPS). In addition, the Association of Parliamentary Librarians of Australasia provided a submission to the Committee, and the National Library of Australia provided advice on international gifts and exchange arrangements.

4. As the principles surrounding distribution arrangements of bound volumes were canvassed during the Committee's 1986 Review of the Cost and Distribution of the Parliamentary Paper Series (Parliamentary Paper No. 450/1986) further submissions were not sought.

Background

5. The debates of the House of Representatives and the Senate are recorded by the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff. On behalf of that Department, AGPS prints separate daily records of the debates of each House.

6. The daily records (or Hansards) are issued in proof form. A short time later, weekly editions are produced. These editions have been checked for errors.

7. At the conclusion of each Autumn and Budget period of sittings an index to speeches, an index to subjects and several pages of information on the membership of the Houses, the Ministry and parliamentary committees are prepared. Ten sets are bound with calf leather spines and corners, and are distributed to various addresses within Parliament House. The remaining 609 sets are bound with buckram covers and distributed in accordance with a distribution list maintained by Hansard.

Distribution

8. In its submission Hansard advised that the current distribution for bound volumes of Hansard is as follows:-

Costs

9. Hansard also provided the Committee with the following details of expenditures:-

| | | $ | $ |
| 1985-86 | 16 490 | 3 253 772 | 190 689 |
| 1986-87 | 15 662 | 3 136 540 | 76 856 |
| 1987-88 | 13 678 | 3 078 024 | 265 712 |
| 1988-89 | 16 841 | 4 101 264 | 464 309 |

10. Advice received from the Government Printer indicated that the average cost to produce and distribute a bound volume of Hansard was $60.50.

Members' and Senators' entitlements

11. Members of the Parliament are entitled to receive bound volumes of Hansard, tail-lettered with their names, covering only their period in office. Ministers receive bound volumes of Hansard, tail-lettered with the titles of their portfolios.

12. Prior to 1977, Members and Senators were provided with bound volumes of Hansard upon request. Following representations from the then Acting Government Printer, who drew attention to the fact that about 90% of Senators and Members availed themselves of their entitlements, the Presiding Officers agreed to a recommendation from the Principal Parliamentary Reporter that bound volumes be provided automatically. It was believed that this arrangement would be more efficient.

13. AGPS advised that its present methods of production for bound volumes of Hansard are based on production line techniques. Accordingly, provision of bound volumes on an ad hoc basis would increase the unit cost.

14. Hansard advised that, according to its records, only two members of the Parliament have not chosen to take up their entitlement over the last five Parliaments. Even in those two cases, the declined entitlement was only for the Hansard of the House for which they were not members.

15. The Committee believes that Senators and Members should retain their entitlement to bound volumes of Hansard as an appropriate record of their service in the Australian Parliament. It also recognises that the current method of production is the more efficient way of producing those volumes. However, it does believe that entitlement should be restricted to the Hansard of the particular House in which a Member has served and not for both Houses, as is the current practice.

16. The Committee recommends:

That, from the commencement of the 36th Parliament, Members of Parliament be entitled to receive Hansard bound volumes of the House in which they have served, covering their period in office, and that these volumes be provided automatically.

17. Notwithstanding the above recommendation, the Committee will continue to monitor Members' and Senators' entitlements to bound volumes.

Official free distribution list

18. Historically, the Joint Committee has endeavoured to ensure that reports of Government agencies are readily available to the public at minimal cost. The dissemination of parliamentary debates is viewed similarly, and the official free distribution list is an essential part of this process. However, a seemingly exhaustive free distribution list for bound volumes is extravagant in view of the fact that currently about 3000 copies of the weekly (i.e. corrected) Hansard are distributed free of charge to various addressees.

19. It is apparent to the Committee that clear guidelines regarding entitlement to receive bound volumes, free of charge, do not exist. An examination of the free distribution list bears this out. For instance:

- . Commonwealth addressees include most, but not all, Ministers and Departments, some Government authorities, Australian missions in Washington, New York, London, Sweden, Djakarta, New Zealand, South Africa, Commonwealth Parliamentary Offices in each State, and several Parliament House addresses.
- . State addressees include the Premiers of Queensland, Tasmania and Victoria, the Colonial Treasurer of NSW, the Governors of Tasmania and Victoria, NSW Public Works Department, NT Department of Mines and Energy, Supreme Court Libraries in the Northern Territory, Queensland, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, numerous Law Court and Law Department libraries, State Public Libraries and State Parliamentary Libraries.
- . Media addressees include Telegraph (Sydney), Queensland Newspaper Co., Advertiser (Adelaide), News (Adelaide), Mercury (Hobart), Examiner (Launceston), Age (Melbourne) and WA Newspapers Ltd.
- . Embassies in Canberra include the embassies or high commissions of Denmark, France, India and Britain.
- . Overseas libraries include parliamentary and/or national libraries of Canada, Fiji, Finland, West Germany, India, Northern Ireland (sic), Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Malaysia, Nauru, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Pakistan, New Guinea, Rhodesia (sic), Sweden, Britain and USA.

Other overseas libraries include university and other libraries in USA, Britain, Singapore, New Zealand, New Guinea and Canada.

20. While wishing to maintain a service to the public, the Committee is anxious to eliminate wastage and reduce costs. It therefore believes that the current free distribution list should be culled as there would appear to be little reason for many recipients to be provided with bound volumes free of charge, given that a thorough distribution of weekly Hansard already occurs. Should Commonwealth Departments and agencies wish to be provided with bound sets of Hansard, it is reasonable to expect the Executive to bear this charge rather than the Parliament. Similarly, State agencies, media organisations and embassies should be asked to pay for bound volumes should they wish to receive them. Suitable exceptions would include State Libraries.

21. The Committee is aware of particular exchange arrangements between libraries. The National Library, for instance, maintains approximately 3000 exchange arrangements and during 1988-89 received 8000 serial titles and 3500 monograph titles through those contacts. In return, the National Library forwards its own publications, or arranges exchanges with other Government instrumentalities. Exchange arrangements also exist between parliamentary libraries. The Committee is satisfied that such arrangements provide relatively cheap and efficient means of equitably exchanging information, and that it is appropriate to include the debates of Parliament in those schemes. Therefore, libraries participating in recognised exchange arrangements should continue to be provided with bound volumes free of charge.

22. The Committee recommends:

That entitlement to receive bound volumes of Hansard be determined according to the following guideline:

That, unless the Presiding Officers otherwise determine, the National Library of Australia, all State and State Parliamentary Libraries, and a country's national or parliamentary library with an exchange arrangement with the National Library of Australia, be eligible to receive one free set of bound volumes of Hansard upon request.

23. Implementation of the above recommendation would cause universities and colleges to be removed from the free distribution list for Hansard bound volumes and would result in free entitlement to those volumes being similar to the entitlement to receive bound volumes of Parliamentary Papers.

24. Although universities and colleges no longer receive bound volumes of Parliamentary Papers, they are entitled to receive additional sets of those papers, collated into volumes and complete with indexes, to bind themselves. Due to the primary research facilities which tertiary institutions provide, it would be appropriate for those institutions similarly to be provided with an additional set of weekly Hansard, together with indexes and associated material, which they could bind themselves.

25. The Committee recommends:

That tertiary institutions, upon request, be entitled to receive an additional set of the weekly volumes of Hansard, together with sessional indexes and information pages, to facilitate self binding of those volumes should those organisations wish to do so.

26. There appears scope for the number of volumes in Parliament House to be rationalised. Currently, 10 volumes are bound with calf leather spines and corners and distributed to the President, the Speaker, the Chambers (4), the House of Representatives Chairman of Committees and the Parliamentary Library (3). A further 34 sets, bound in buckram, are distributed to internal addressees. Given that the Hansard of each House is readily accessible to Senators, Members and staff via the on-line Parliamentary Database System, the number of sets of bound volumes being received in the new Parliament House is considered excessive.

27. The Committee recommends:

That the number of half calf volumes produced be reduced to 5 and distribution be restricted to the Presiding Officers, the Chambers and the Parliamentary Library.

That bound volumes be provided to the party leaders in each House.

That the parliamentary departments take action to reduce the number of sets of bound volumes currently being received.

Subscriptions

28. Hansard advised that there are 66 subscribers to Hansard bound volumes. For each volume subscribers are charged $7.50 as partial recovery of the cost of distribution (ie, postage). An examination of the distribution list reveals that subscribers include Australian and overseas universities and colleges, legal firms, Commonwealth departments and agencies, business and union groups, media groups and certain individuals.

29. Historically, Hansard has been made available at a nominal charge. In 1975 the Joint Committee on Publications resolved that any Australian who wants access to the proceedings of Parliament should be able to do so provided the cost of postage is met. This has been seen to be a contribution to the democratic process and a means of enabling interested parties being informed of parliamentary proceedings by means independent from the media.

30. While the Committee believes that these sentiments are still valid for the dissemination of the weekly Hansard, it is difficult to apply the same reasoning to the distribution of bound volumes, as they are produced sometime (ie, about a year) after the end of the sessional period.

31. Furthermore, technological advances have enabled permanent records to be kept on media other than paper, and the hardware and software to use this is readily available. Microform technology has been common in libraries for many years and recent advances in compact disk technology have enabled it to be a very useful and low-cost reference tool. AGPS, for instance, advised of its CD-ROM development which will enable all current Commonwealth Acts and regulations to be stored on a single compact disk which could be quickly and easily searched by users. A disk containing Hansard could also be developed using the same technology. The Committee believes that it would be appropriate for the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff to pursue alternative media forms for the production of Hansard.

32. The Committee recommends:

That the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff investigate the feasibility and desirability of producing Hansard in media forms other than paper.

33. The Committee concludes that it is not appropriate for bound volumes of Hansard to continue to be available at a price representing only the cost of postage. Alternative media are capable of disseminating Hansard more efficiently and cheaply and therefore should users wish to acquire a hard copy bound version it is appropriate that the production as well as distribution costs be met.

34. The Committee recommends:

That subscribers to Hansard bound volumes be charged a fee as determined by the Presiding Officers, representing the cost of production and distribution of each volume.

Stored sets

35. Hansard advised that "about 30 sets are placed in store after each distribution. These are used to meet requests from organisations or individuals for full sets from 1953 to date or for particular volumes. Such requests are made reasonably frequently - on average, about three requests per month - and come from organisations and people entitled to them free of charge and from organisations and people wishing to purchase them. As the number of bound volumes put in store is only about 30, or less than 5 per cent of the number produced, it is not considered desirable to reduce that number at this stage."

36. In the event that subscriptions are raised as recommended and the Committee's recommended guideline regarding entitlement to receive bound volumes free of charge is adopted, it is anticipated that the number of volumes required for store will diminish. Until future requirements are known it would be difficult to determine a suitable number to be retained in store, but the Committee believes that such a need would be minimal.

37. The Committee recommends:

That, contingent on the adoption of the above recommendations, the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff reassess the need to retain 30 sets of bound volumes in store.

Savings

38. In 1988-89, production of bound volumes of Hansard cost the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff $464 309. AGPS advised that the average cost to produce a volume was $60.50. Since, on average, the Hansard of each House requires 6 volumes, each recipient of the bound volume series receives 12 volumes each year, costing $726 to produce.

39. Should the distribution list be amended as recommended, future needs would be as follows:-

|---|-------|
| Presiding Officers, Chambers and the Parliamentary Library | 5 |
| Members of the Parliament (one House only) | 224 |
| Official free distribution list - | |
| Commonwealth addresses | 36 |
| State addresses | 16 |
| Overseas libraries | 11 |
| | 63 |
| Subscriptions | 66 |
| Store | 30 |
| | 388 |

40. Based on the average cost of a complete set of both Hansards being $726, the annual cost of production would be $200 376. Had production of Hansard bound volumes occurred in 1988-89 along the guidelines recommended by the Committee in this report, a saving of $263 933 would have been achieved.

41. Further savings would result if the parliamentary departments rationalise their requirements and Hansard reduces the number of volumes it retains in store.

DEPARTMENT OF THE PARLIAMENTARY REPORTING STAFF

SUBMISSION TO THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATIONS INQUIRY INTO THE DISTRIBUTION OF HANSARD BOUND VOLUMES

The Hansard bound volumes are prepared and distributed for the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff by the Australian Government Publishing Service. Since 1953 separate sets of bound volumes have been published for the Senate and the House of Representatives for each sessional period of sittings. The latest available bound volumes are those for the autumn sessional period of 1988, which were distributed in May this year.

2. When the pages for the weekly edition of Hansard are printed, about 620 extra copies are printed and stored. After each sessional period, an index to speeches, an index to subjects and several pages of information on the membership of the Houses, the Ministry and parliamentary committees are prepared by the Parliamentary Reporting Staff, printed by the Government Printer and added to the previously printed pages. The total Hansard is then bound, usually in three volumes for each House. These are distributed about a year after the end of the sessional period.

3. The Department's expenditures over recent years on the printing, binding and distribution of Hansard and the bound volume component of those expenditures are set out in the following table:

| Financial Year | No. of Hansard Pages | Total Expenditure on printing, binding and distribution of Hansard | Expenditure on printing, binding and distribution of bound volumes (inc. indexes) |
|----------------|----------------------|--|---|
| | | $ | $ |
| 1985-86 | 16,490 | 3,253,772 | 190,689 |
| 1986-87 | 15,662 | 3,136,540 | 76,856 |
| 1987-88 | 13,678 | 3,078,024 | 265,712 |
| 1988-89 | 16,841 | 4,101,264 | 464,309 |

4. Currently, the number of sets of bound volumes produced is 619. Ten of these have calf leather spines and corners and are for the Presiding Officers, the Chambers and the Parliamentary Library. The remaining 609 have buckram covers and are distributed as follows:

|---|-----|
| Members of the Parliament for that sessional period | 220 |
| Official free distribution list - | |
| Commonwealth departments and agencies | 135 |
| State departments and agencies | 54 |
| Universities and colleges | 43 |
| Media | 8 |
| Embassies in Canberra | 8 |
| Overseas libraries | 45 |
| | 293 |
| Subscriptions | 66 |
| Store | 30 |

5. Members of the Parliament are entitled to receive bound volumes covering their period in office.

According to the Department's records, over the last five Parliaments only two members of the Parliament have chosen not to avail themselves of their entitlement.

6. Organisations entitled to receive bound volumes free of charge are: Other Parliaments, government departments or agencies, high commissions or embassies, libraries and tertiary education institutions.

Traditionally, this entitlement has been seen as a contribution to the democratic process and as desirable in the interests of encouraging citizens to read full and accurate reports of the proceedings of the Parliament and making those reports readily available to persons and organisations with a need for accurate information about those proceedings.

7. The 66 subscribers are charged $7.50 per volume, as partial recovery of the cost of distribution.

8. About 30 sets are placed in store after each distribution. These are used to meet requests from organisations or individuals for full sets from 1953 to date or for particular volumes. Such requests are made reasonably frequently - on average, about three requests per month - and come from organisations and people entitled to them free of charge and from organisations and people wishing to purchase them.

9. As the number of bound volumes put in store is only about 30, or less than 5 per cent of the number produced, it is not considered desirable to reduce that number at this stage.

10. On the matter of cost recovery, as mentioned earlier, access to Hansard, either without charge or at a nominal charge, traditionally has been seen as a contribution to the democratic process.

For instance, in the first Commonwealth Parliament a general instruction was given to the Principal Parliamentary Reporter by President Baker and Speaker Holder to grant any application (for inclusion on the official free distribution list for Weekly Hansards) from newspapers, schools of arts and kindred organisations, debating societies and associations having a membership of 50 and over.

Also, in 1975 the then Presiding Officers, in a letter to the then Treasurer, referred to the following resolution agreed to by the Publications Committee on 6 March 1975:

That this Committee is of the opinion that any Australian who wants access to the proceedings of Parliament should be able to do so provided he meets the cost of postage.

They went on to say:

Presiding Officers and Publications (Printing) Committees from the time of the first Parliament have considered that the circulation of Hansard should be encouraged because of the importance of informing the public fully and authoritatively of all the proceedings in the national Parliament, providing a protection for its members against inaccuracies in imperfect and condensed newspaper versions, and maintaining an uninterrupted flow of communication between Parliament and the people.

The cost of broadcasting the proceedings is accepted by Parliament as a responsibility for informing and educating the public by giving them an immediate account of what is happening. Hansard fulfils a similar purpose but in a permanent form.

That was at a time when an earlier decision to charge subscribers for the Weekly Hansard the printing run-on cost plus postage had resulted in the annual subscription rising from $1.20 to $63.10 and that had led to strong public protests against the rise and a massive reduction in the number of subscribers. In 1977 the subscription was set at the current figure of $20.

11. As to a suggestion that bound volumes be provided to senators and members upon request rather than automatically, such a system was in operation before 1977, when the then Acting Government Printer drew attention to the fact that about 90 per cent of senators and members requested their bound volumes and that the system was 'far from satisfactory' and caused complaints, delays and increased costs. He suggested that it would be 'more economical and a better arrangement to supply each senator and member with a copy of each issue'. The then Principal Parliamentary Reporter recommended that that system be abolished and that the bound volumes be issued to senators and members automatically, and his recommendation was approved by the then Presiding Officers.

Dear Mr Kiermaier,

In response to your request for further information relating to the distribution of bound volumes of Hansard, I submit the following:

1. Members and Senators are entitled to receive both Senate and House of Representatives bound volumes for the period they are in office.
2. According to the Department's records, there are 35 organisations that receive both bound volumes and weekly editions of Hansard on a free distribution basis.
3. The normal practice is for organisations to receive only one copy of bound volumes. However, Parliamentary departments receive up to three additional copies and the Australian National University and the University of Sydney receive one additional copy.

A copy of the free distribution mailing list is enclosed.

BOUND VOLUMES OF HANSARD

Reference is made to your letter of 15 August 1989 asking for information on the costing for printing, binding and distribution of bound volumes of Hansard.

The Australian Government Publishing Service (AGPS) have for many years produced these volumes. At the time of printing Weekly Hansards, additional copies to fulfil quantities of bound volumes (about 620 of each edition of both Senate and House of Representatives) are printed, folded and stored as uncut sections. Some time following the completion of a session, indexes to speeches, debates and miscellaneous information is provided which is then typeset, printed and folded.

These sections are combined and case bound to specifications, spine lettered and distributed according to address labels. Usually there are three volumes in each session for the Senate or House of Representatives. According to our records for 1988/89, total costs were in the order of $450 000.00. For two Houses, two sessions, 620 copies each of three volumes a price per volume is about $60.50.

In terms of a cost for the provision of volumes on an ad hoc basis, it would increase the per volume cost. Sufficient copies of textual matter would still need to be printed and ad hoc binding, lettering and distribution costs would increase. Present methods of production are based on a production line basis.

However, AGPS is willing to assist in any way requested by the Committee noting that the cost per volume would increase if ad hoc production were introduced.

With reference to your request for information on initiatives being undertaken by this organisation to make a permanent form of Hansard available on electronic or other media I would like to bring to your attention two types of storage and retrieval systems currently available at AGPS.

The first is operated by our Demand Publishing Unit and involves the scanning of hard copy Hansards to optical disk. Specific pages or complete copies of daily issues can be printed 'on demand'.

Although a fee would have to be applied to this service, sales are not expected to cover the high costs of this labour intensive operation and an initial charge to Parliament for storage might be necessary.

This system also has future possibilities to accept magnetic data.

The second system is CD-ROM based. DISKROM AUSTRALIA, a joint venture between the Commonwealth and CLS, is currently in the process of publishing Commonwealth and other information material stored on CD-ROM.

Ways of storing all Hansards on CD-ROM are presently explored and two methods have already emerged as feasible:

- (1) Hansards produced between 1901 and 1981 could be scanned as images and stored on CD-ROM. Required pages could be retrieved by users through specially created indexes.
- (2) Hansards produced since 1981 are understood to be available in machine readable text form from the Parliamentary database, allowing the searching of words and phrases across the database.

Fees would depend on possible sales and have to cover a per page conversion cost. CD-ROM technology allows for low-cost mass reproduction and dissemination of information.

It is expected to take up to one year for a working disk to be in operation, depending on resources.

CANBERRA ACT 2600

Dear Sir,

Members of the Association of Parliamentary Librarians of Australasia have noted that your current enquiry relates to the distribution of bound copies of Hansard.

One of the terms of reference for your Committee is to consider "the desirability of those on the official distribution list being asked to pay a subscription fee and the subscription fee being raised to cost recovery plus 10%".

As Parliamentary Libraries are on the official distribution list we believe that it is important that our views be represented.

The Committee must be aware that Hansard is a primary source of information which must be preserved in the nation's major research libraries. These national, state and academic libraries are used regularly by students, academics, members of the legal profession and businessmen who may need to research historical aspects of legislation or social changes brought about as a result of legislation. In recent years the cost recovery policies of most Government Printers have caused librarians to review their collecting policies with the result that the national collection is deteriorating. Our constant dilemma is that we must try to maintain services while facing limited budgets and increasing costs. Often the decision must be made to cancel orders for many important, but little used, publications.

Parliamentary Libraries, however, must collect all Parliamentary publications as Members of all of the Parliaments in Australia regularly use Hansard, and associated publications, as primary research tools.

At present certain core publications such as Hansard, statutes and tabled papers are exchanged free of charge between all Parliamentary Libraries. In the long term this has been found to be the cheapest, and most efficient and effective way, to ensure distribution of the most important parliamentary publications on an equitable basis. If subscription fees are charged by the Commonwealth there will be a complete breakdown of the exchange system which, in turn, will lead to increased administration costs as paperwork and the necessary follow up systems are put into place. Ultimately, the smaller Parliamentary Libraries will be seriously disadvantaged as they will have to pay large subscription fees in order to receive the more numerous publications from the Commonwealth and larger States.

Bound volumes of Hansard are accessible and easy to use because they are indexed and the binding acts as a form of preservation. Loose copies tend to become discoloured and torn after a few years' use. They also tend to be handled more frequently as there are no cumulative indexing services provided with the weekly or daily copies of Hansard. Also, it is much easier for librarians to maintain complete sets of bound volumes as single paper issues can be easily removed from the library by users who can accidentally remove them with their own papers.

Until technology allows us to store and access Hansard in a more suitable format we must continue to rely on the bound volumes to serve the needs of our library users.

In summary, bound volumes of the Commonwealth Hansard are deemed to be essential components in every major library in Australia. If subscription fees are set most libraries will have serious problems either trying to obtain additional funding or deleting other important publications from their purchasing programmes.

Therefore, the Association of Parliamentary Librarians of Australasia believes that the official distribution list should remain free for participating libraries so that library users do not suffer from a further degradation in their library services.

Yours faithfully,

Roslynn Membrey

Dear Mr Kiermaier

Thank you for your letter of September 27, 1989 concerning aspects of the distribution arrangements for bound volumes of Hansard.

The National Library was designated the Commonwealth Exchange Authority in 1947 and at present the Library maintains approximately 3000 exchange arrangements. Through these contacts in 1988-89 the Library received 8000 serial titles and 3500 monograph titles. While all exchange materials are assessed against collection building guidelines, the publications are also balanced on a title-to-title and cost basis.

The National Library reciprocates by sending its own publications, $110,000 in 1988-89, or arranging exchanges with other government instrumentalities. Failing to obtain free copies, the Library purchases publications from commercial outlets.

Only 7 exchange contacts wish to continue receiving bound volumes of the Parliamentary Papers series. Each of these exchange partners is either the National or Parliamentary Library of their particular country, and is regarded as the most valuable source of exchange material. A list of these contacts is attached.

The criterion used to determine eligibility was examined in 1987 (copy attached). If further information is required, please contact the Library.

Yours sincerely

CANBERRA ACT 2600

Dear Senator Elstob

The Department of Foreign Affairs has passed to the Library copies of your letter enquiring about the possible future extent of overseas distribution of Parliamentary publications arising from Australia's ratification on 15 June 1984 of the Convention concerning the International Exchange of Publications and the Convention concerning the Exchange of Official Publications and Government Documents between States and of their reply dated 12 February 1987.

Since being designated the Commonwealth Exchange Authority in 1947, the National Library has accepted the responsibility for determining the level of exchange of Australian government publications. In fact, conventions or no conventions, the actual business of getting government publications to satisfy existing exchange arrangements has become more and more difficult over the years, to the extent that the future viability of many longstanding arrangements is brought into question. We are involved in a continuing review of our whole gift and exchange operation and for this reason I am not now in a position to forecast future demand. I feel sure, however, that the present level of distribution of Parliamentary Papers will be seen as a minimum.

As the Library's review of the demand for Parliamentary papers has indicated, we are aware of the cost of publishing and distributing government publications. Our exchange partners, who are experiencing the same difficulties, are responding well to eliminate wastage and concentrate on exchange material which is either a primary source of information or not available commercially.

Yours sincerely

principle, Government business enterprises

7. BOUND VOLUMES OF HANSARD

The Committee considered a letter, dated 12 May 1989, from the Presiding Officers requesting the Committee to inquire into and report on the distribution of bound volumes of Hansard.

Resolved (Senator McKiernan) -

- (1) That the Committee inquire into and report on the distribution of bound volumes of Hansard, with particular reference to :
