CHAIRMAN'S REVIEW

Hon G F Punch, MP
(Chairman)

On behalf of the members of the Joint Committee of Public Accounts, I am pleased to present the Committee's report of activities for the financial year 1 July 1991 to 30 June 1992. This annual report continues the practice established in 1976 of informing the Parliament of the Committee's activities and highlighting issues of public administration for discussion and review.

The year commenced with the Minister for Immigration announcing that the Government had accepted the key recommendations made by the Committee in its Report 310 on the Business Migration Program. In effect, this announcement meant the winding up of the Business Migration Program and signalled the conclusion of one of the Committee's most effective inquiries.

At the conclusion of the year, the Committee had presented eight reports to the Parliament. These reports covered a wide range of subjects including Defence computing systems, the administrative and financial relationship between Medicare and Medibank Private and the social responsibilities of Commonwealth statutory authorities and government business enterprises.

While the acceptance of recommendations in a report is important from the Committee's point of view, this year has demonstrated again that change often occurs during an inquiry as issues and concerns are brought into focus. This was the case with the Inquiry into the Supply Systems Redevelopment Project, an inquiry concerned with the development and implementation of computer systems for Defence's supply needs. The Committee believes that this inquiry contributed significantly to the progress of the Supply Systems Redevelopment Project and to the level of commitment to the Project shown by the Department of Defence and the three Services. The Committee also believes that the Inquiry was a catalyst for change and, in another area, stemmed a significant leap in the prices of computer software paid by the Commonwealth.

On the subject of information technology, the year saw a number of developments within the Parliament which have been of benefit to the Committee: an electronic mail system was introduced, enabling the fast sending and receiving of material in an electronic form, and a trial loading of transcripts of evidence onto the Parliamentary Database was undertaken. As part of this trial, transcripts of evidence from two Public Accounts Committee inquiries (the Inquiry into the Midford Paramount Case and the Inquiry into the Supply Systems Redevelopment Project) were loaded onto the Database. The facility to readily and quickly access evidence has been a real boon to the operation of the Committee and it is hoped that in the not too distant future submissions and other documents may also be stored electronically.

During 1991-92 the Committee initiated two major inquiries, one into the Australian Taxation Office and the other into Human Resource Management in the Australian Public Service. Both inquiries attracted a substantial amount of interest.

The Inquiry into Human Resource Management was initiated in response to a perceived need for there to be a greater focus on the management of people in the Australian Public Service. The last few years have seen reforms and advances in a range of public sector management areas but none have really focused on people. So while the Committee applauded both the financial reforms that have occurred and the focus on achieving results, it was strongly of the view that the human element needed to be addressed.

The interest in the area of Human Resource Management is no more evident than in the number of conferences organised throughout the year on the subject. Various members of the Committee and I were invited to speak at these conferences. It was not possible to accept all invitations but whenever possible we welcomed the opportunity to explain our work in this very important area. I am sure that members of the Committee would agree with me that as members of the Joint Committee of Public Accounts we have a responsibility to explain our role and work to those who are part of the public sector.

At the conclusion of the year, arrangements were being finalised for the Committee to conduct its own one day conference on human resource management in conjunction with the Royal Australian Institute of Public Administration.

During the year the Committee continued its review of the role and work of the Independent Auditor - the auditor who audits the Australian National Audit Office!

This review, perhaps understandably, did not attract the same degree of interest as the inquiries into Human Resource Management and the Tax Office but it was nevertheless of great significance in terms of public accountability. The Committee was pleased with the involvement of the main players in this area and welcomed submissions from a number of overseas audit offices.

In recent years the Committee's reports of activities have reported on progress in relation to recommendations made by the Committee in its Report No. 296, The Auditor-General: Ally of the People and the Parliament - Reform of the Australian Audit Office. While responses to many of the recommendations have now been implemented, progress is slow on a few others. As at the end of 1991-92 there is very little to report on the introduction of new financial management legislation to replace the Audit Act 1901. Officers of the Department of Finance and the Auditor-General and his officers have continued to brief and consult with the Committee on this matter. Related to this legislation is the establishment of an Audit Committee of the Australian Parliament. Again, there is little progress to report in this area.

The Department of Finance and the Australian National Audit Office have continued to provide the Committee with direct support for its work. An officer from the Department of Finance and several officers from the Audit Office were seconded to the Committee's Secretariat during the year and proved to be of great assistance to the Committee. Such secondments provide the individuals concerned with an invaluable experience and are potentially of significant benefit to the individuals' parent organisations.

On behalf of the Committee I wish to acknowledge, with great appreciation, the work of the Committee's permanent staff and the various other areas of the Parliament, such as Hansard, the Sound and Vision Office, the attendants, and the Library, who contribute to our successful operation.

In conclusion, I would like to record my thanks to Senator John Watson, the Committee's Vice Chairman, and all my colleagues on the Committee, for their efforts in furthering the work of the Committee. I also take this opportunity to congratulate Senator Watson for being named during the year by the Australian Society of Certified Practising Accountants as one of the five members of the Society who have done the most to promote the mission and objectives of the Society.

Chapter 1

THE COMMITTEE

Background

1.1 The first Commonwealth Joint Committee of Public Accounts was established in 1913 and was re-appointed in successive Parliaments until 1932, when it was suspended as an 'economy measure'. The Committee was re-established by the Public Accounts Committee Act 1951, which sets out its powers, functions and method of operation. As such, it is one of five statutory committees of the Parliament.

1.2 The present Committee is the seventeenth appointed since 1952. Its purpose is to ensure the accountability of the public sector to the Parliament and it does this by scrutinising the moneys expended by, and the efficiency of, Commonwealth Government departments and agencies.

Membership

1.3 The Committee has 15 members, five of whom are appointed by the Senate and 10 by the House of Representatives. Both Government and Opposition members are represented on the Committee and it is accepted practice that the majority of members be from the Government Party. By tradition, the Committee's Chairman is a Government member elected by the whole Committee, while the Vice-Chairman is elected from the Opposition members. As a standing committee of the Parliament, Committee members continue to hold office (subject to certain qualifications) until the end of the Parliament by which they were appointed.

1.4 The Committee has always adopted a bipartisan approach to its work and is proud of the fact that since the appointment of the first Committee in 1952, its reports to the Parliament have been unanimous, with only one exception.

Independence

1.5 The Public Accounts Committee Act 1951 gives the Committee the right to operate with absolute independence. This power derives principally from sections 6A(1) and 8(1)(b) of the Act which read respectively:

- The Committee may meet at such times and at such places within Australia as the Committee, by resolution, determines or, subject to any resolution of the Committee, as the Chairman determines ...
- ... to report to both Houses of the Parliament, with such comment as it thinks fit, any items or matters in those accounts, statements and reports, or any circumstances connected with them, to which the Committee is of the opinion that the attention of the Parliament should be directed.

Functions

1.6 Section 8(1) of the Public Accounts Committee Act 1951 sets out the Committee's main duties. Section 8(1)(b) of the Act, quoted above, gives the Committee the power to determine the areas of government administration it may wish to investigate. In addition, it is required to examine:

- the accounts of the receipts and expenditure of the Commonwealth;
- the financial affairs of Commonwealth authorities and intergovernmental bodies; and
- all reports of the Auditor-General, including his efficiency audit reports.

1.7 It also reports on any alterations it thinks desirable in the form of public accounts, the method of keeping them, or in the mode of receipt, control, issue or payment of public moneys.

1.8 Under section 25 of the Public Service Act 1922 the Committee is responsible for approving the guidelines for departmental annual reports; other duties are assigned to the Committee by Commonwealth legislation on statutory marketing authorities.

Mode of Operation

1.9 The usual practice is for the Committee to determine its own work program and inquiries. Either House of Parliament may also refer any question in connection with the public accounts for inquiry and report and other duties may be assigned to the Committee by Joint Standing Orders approved by both Houses of Parliament.

1.10 Through the use of sectional committees (sub-committees), the Committee is able to undertake a number of inquiries concurrently. In 1991-92, there were seven sectional committees in operation.

1.11 Inquiries are generally advertised in the national press. In addition, relevant individuals and organisations are invited to make written submissions. These submissions form the basis of evidence and facilitate questioning at the Committee's public hearings. Where secret or confidential matters are being considered, the Committee's Act provides for evidence to be taken in camera. Observers from the Australian National Audit Office (ANAO) and the Department of Finance assist the Committee at its public hearings by providing expert advice on the matters under discussion.

1.12 The Committee is supported by a full-time secretariat, which provides procedural, research and administrative assistance. Specialist advisers and consultants, from both the public and private sectors, provide technical advice to the Committee as the need arises. The Committee also has a policy of accepting officers on secondment from Commonwealth departments and agencies. Of particular importance is the regular secondment of officers from the ANAO and the Department of Finance, as both these organisations have a long-standing and close relationship with the Committee.

Chapter 2

REPORTS PRESENTED

2.1 The Committee tabled eight reports in 1991-92. They were:

- Report 311 - Report of Activities 1990-91
- Report 312 - Finance Minutes
- Report 313 - Control of Visitor Entry
- Report 314 - Eight Performance Audits
- Report 315 - Social Responsibilities of Commonwealth Statutory Authorities and Government Business Enterprises
- Report 316 - The Administrative and Financial Relationships between Medicare and Medibank Private
- Report 317 - A champagne appetite but only a beer income - Defence's Supply Systems Redevelopment Project
- Report 318 - Public Sector Research and Development: Volume 1 of a Report on Research and Development

2.2 This chapter presents an overview of each report, together with a summary of the Committee's main findings and recommendations where relevant.

Report 311 - Report of Activities 1990-91

2.3 Report 311 is a report on the Committee's activities for the 1990-91 financial year. As with this report, Report 311 presents information on inquiries current at the end of the financial year and those tabled during the year.

Report 312 - Finance Minutes

2.4 Report 312 is a consolidated volume of Department of Finance Minutes received and tabled by the Committee in the 1991 calendar year.

2.5 The Department of Finance Minute is the formal response to a Committee report. Under this system the Chairman of the Committee writes to the Minister for Finance upon the tabling of a Committee report, requesting the Minister to arrange the preparation of a Finance Minute. The Department of Finance then refers the report to the appropriate departmental secretaries and coordinates the preparation of responses to the Committee. Responses are usually provided within six months of the tabling of each Committee report.

2.6 The Committee tables each Finance Minute in Parliament as soon as practicable after its receipt, with additional comment if necessary. In addition, the Committee publishes an annual volume of all the Finance Minutes received in that year with comment as required.

2.7 The tabling of a Finance Minute does not mark the end of the Committee's scrutiny of the matters contained in the Minute, as the Committee has reserved the right to conduct a detailed analysis subsequent to tabling. Where it is warranted, the Committee may undertake a further formal inquiry into the matters dealt with in the initial report and the corresponding Finance Minute.

2.8 In those cases where a Government response on policy matters is required, this is tabled separately from the Finance Minute and within the time frame applying to Government responses to other Committees' reports - that is three months from the date of tabling.

2.9 Report 312 contains the Finance Minutes relating to three Committee reports. These are shown in Table 2.1.

Table 2.1 - Finance Minutes Considered in Report 312

Report Number	Report Title
305	Review of the Finance Minute on Report 270 - Implementation of the Offsets Program - Supplement

Report 313 - Control of Visitor Entry

2.10 Report 313 arose from the announcement in June 1990 of the Committee's Inquiry into the Business Migration Program and Control of Visitor Entry. Because of the widespread concern about the Business Migration Program, it was decided to partition the Inquiry and examine the Business Migration Program before proceeding to matters relating to the control of visitor entry.

2.11 The Committee received 57 submissions from 41 organisations and individuals and conducted three public hearings, the first being on 19 October 1990. As well, inspections were made of the Entry Control Points at the Kingsford-Smith Airport, Sydney and the entry Operations Centre at the Department of Immigration, Local Government and Ethnic Affairs Central Office in Canberra. The report was tabled on 18 December 1991.

2.12 In examining the development and implementation of the Immigration Records and Information System, and Travel and Immigration Processing System, the Committee observed that the Department had developed a system which allows for the rapid processing of visitor and temporary entry visa applications, while maintaining an effective screen to prevent the entry of persons whose presence in Australia would not be desirable.

Recommendations in the report include:

- the areas of resource levels for compliance activity within the Department of Immigration, Local Government and Ethnic Affairs; and
- the establishment of a working party with membership from the Department, the Australian Federal Police and State police forces to measure the extent of criminal activity of persons entering Australia on visitor and temporary entry visas.

Report 314 - Eight Performance Audits

2.14

Report 314 outlines the Committee's findings on matters contained in eight performance audit reports of the Auditor-General tabled in Parliament between May and November 1990. Examination of the Auditor-General's reports and the auditees' responses to his recommendations is carried out by the Committee in accordance with the Public Accounts Committee Act 1951.

2.15

The reports examined included:

- Department of Veterans' Affairs - Repatriation General Hospital Concord - Central Sterilising Supply Department (Report 30 1989-90);
- Royal Australian Mint - coin production (Report 34 1989-90);
- Department of Employment, Education and Training Portfolio - Risk Management - Higher Education: recurrent grants - Industry Training Support (Report 4 1990-91);
- Survey of Internal Audit in the Commonwealth Public Sector (Report 6 1990-91);
- Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade - Passport issue and control (Report 7 1990-91);
- Department of Social Security - payment of pensions overseas (Report 8 1990-91);

Department of the Arts, Sport, the Environment, Tourism and Territories - Antarctic Supply Vessel - chartering arrangements (Report 9 1990-91); and

Department of Community Services and Health - National Aids Program (Report 11 1990-91).

2.16 The Committee noted that the Auditor-General had identified a number of concerns and made recommendations to address them. The Committee was pleased with the generally high rate of acceptance by auditees of the Auditor-General's recommendations, but found two areas of concern remaining. They related to:

the rejection by the Department of Finance of the Auditor-General's recommendation that the new financial administration legislation require all Commonwealth organisations to have an internal audit function; and the absence of an adequately funded, efficiently operating internal audit program in the Department of Employment, Education and Training.

2.17 The Committee believes that internal audit has a very important role to play in the Commonwealth public sector in providing management with assurance on the adequacy of financial and other management controls. It also contributes to the improvement of public sector accountability and administration. The Committee strongly supported the recommendations of the ANAO to strengthen the internal audit function and recommended that:

the Department of Employment, Education and Training ensure that it has an adequately resourced internal audit unit to undertake the Department's audit program; and the new financial administration legislation require that all Commonwealth organisations establish an effective internal audit function.

2.18 During the conduct of this review, the Committee noted the importance of the work performed by the Auditor-General. His role in enhancing the efficiency and effectiveness with which government agencies operate is vital, with his office representing a link in the accountability of these bodies to the Parliament. The Committee was pleased to note that the ANAO had embarked on a program of follow-up audits, as recommended in the Committee's Report 296. It believes that this move will increase the pressure on auditees to improve their efficiency and effectiveness.

2.19 The Committee regrets that a number of recommendations made by the Committee in its Report 296, which were designed to strengthen the position of the ANAO and confirm its direct relationship with Parliament, were rejected or ignored by the Government. The Committee urges the Government to make a greater commitment to supporting the ANAO by ensuring that it is an independent, properly resourced, highly professional and apolitical office.

Report 315 - Social Responsibilities of Commonwealth Statutory Authorities and Government Business Enterprises

2.20 The Committee's Report 315 presents the findings of the Committee's Inquiry into the Social Responsibilities of Commonwealth Statutory Authorities and Government Business Enterprises. The Inquiry was commenced in September 1989 by the Sixteenth Committee and resumed by the Seventeenth Committee in June 1990 following the March Federal election. It was launched in the context of a number of significant changes that occurred in the operations of the public sector in Australia during the 1980s. An increased emphasis on cost-effectiveness and on commercial returns for commercially-oriented authorities led to concern that achievement of financial targets might be at the expense of the performance of these agencies' social responsibilities.

2.21 The focus of the Inquiry was the development of measurement and reporting of the performance by statutory authorities and government business enterprises (GBE) of their social responsibilities. Their social responsibilities were seen as including responsibilities to their employees and clients, which were considered in terms of the social justice principles of access, equity and participation. In addition, responsibilities to the wider community and the environment were considered important.

2.22 The Committee noted that social responsibilities may be imposed on organisations by law or regulation or undertaken voluntarily. Some of the budget-dependent statutory authorities claimed that their whole reason for being was to fulfil a social responsibility, such as providing a broadcasting service, which the Government had undertaken on behalf of the community. By contrast, the commercial orientation of other organisations precluded their undertaking uneconomic activity unless, like providing equal employment opportunity or training, it is also beneficial to them. While the Committee believed that the behaviour of government entities should be of the highest standard, they should not be expected to behave with a greater degree of social responsibility than other organisations.

2.23 A theme of the Inquiry was the reporting of social responsibilities. The basis of an effective reporting system is a clear definition of programs' objectives, with targets against which achievements can be measured. Performance information should include a focus on outcomes and the use of several indicators for each program which are collected in the same form over time. It should also rely on both qualitative and quantitative data. The effective use of performance information depends on experienced staff, of which there is a shortage.

2.24 The Committee found that there was considerable variation in the extent of reporting of achievement in equal employment opportunity by different types of statutory authorities, and recommended that it should be more standardised and more consistently monitored and publicly available. The uptake of social justice concerns within the context of program management and budgeting has been slower among statutory authorities than by departments, and should be expedited and extended to the community service obligations (CSO) of GBEs. The use of consultative and advisory groups was seen as an important method of allowing input of community interests. More extensive reporting of performance in relation to responsibilities towards the environment is also specified, including any significant environmental impacts and violations of accepted standards and how these have been rectified. A 'social responsibility summary' was seen as a means of outlining activities undertaken by statutory authorities in relation to their social responsibilities.

2.25 The Committee considered the value of social responsibilities and found that, even when all the impacts of a program can be identified, it may not be cost-effective to attach a value to them and is not always easy to do so. Attaching values to the performance of social responsibilities has been most studied in relation to community service obligations placed on GBEs to provide particular services to certain classes of consumer at less than cost. Monetary values can be much more readily calculated for the costs of these programs than for the benefits they produce. Despite the difficulties associated with cost-benefit analyses, the Committee encouraged their use, particularly before major changes are made to the operation of statutory authorities.

2.26 Costing the provision of CSOs allows assessment of the efficiency with which they are provided and forms the basis for decisions about their funding. While the Government has decided on the method of least avoidable cost for estimating CSO costs, the appropriateness of this method needs to be kept under review.

2.27 Scrutiny of the reports of statutory authorities, especially when feedback is provided, applies pressure on them to behave in a socially responsible manner. So too does the guidance provided by codes of conduct for employees and the presence on the boards and among senior management of people with appropriate personal and professional qualifications.

Report 316 - The Administrative and Financial Relationships Between Medicare and Medibank Private

2.28 Report 316 presents the results of an examination made by the Committee of the financial and administrative relationships between Medicare and Medibank Private.

2.29 The Committee undertook the Inquiry in response to ongoing criticism by the Australian Health Insurance Association of the joint administration of these functions by the Health Insurance Commission. Asset utilisation practices and the method of cost apportionment had also been raised for discussion in Senate Estimates hearings on numerous occasions.

2.30 Despite advertising in the national press only two submissions were received by the closing date for submissions - one from the Health Insurance Commission and one from the Australian Health Insurance Association. As a result the Inquiry was brief. Each organisation was invited to comment on the other's submission and the input of the ANAO was also sought. The Committee decided not to hold public hearings as the issues to be considered in the Inquiry were concise and thoroughly debated in the written evidence.

2.31 Having considered the evidence, the Committee concluded that the present system is equitable and that, should instances of cross-subsidisation arise, they would be highlighted by the audit process.

2.32 Despite its brevity, the Committee considers that the Inquiry has been a valuable one, as it has provided a forum in which these long-standing concerns could be aired and counter arguments presented.

Report 317 - A champagne appetite but only a beer income - Defence's Supply Systems Redevelopment Project

2.33 Report 317 presents the Committee's findings and recommendations on the Supply Systems Redevelopment Project (SSRP), a project which aims to create a common core computing system to cater for the supply needs of the Australian Defence Force - that is the Australian Army, the Royal Australian Navy and the Royal Australian Air Force. SSRP is a very large and complex project and despite having commenced in the mid-1970s, is not scheduled to be completed until 1998.

2.34 SSRP is closely linked to DESINE (the Defence EDP Systems Integrated Network Environment), a concept or strategy aimed at the decentralisation and standardisation of Defence computing. During the Inquiry a significant amount of time was taken up examining various aspects of the DESINE contract - a five year contract with IBM which makes IBM the sole supplier of computing equipment until February 1994. Although the DESINE Request For Tender explicitly sets out a requirement for a network architecture supporting open systems, the Department of Defence was later to describe the solution it acquired through the DESINE contract as an implementation of Systems Applications Architecture (SAA) - an IBM proprietary architecture.

2.35 The Committee expressed its concern about the possibility that the Department of Defence might be unable to move from IBM equipment after the expiration of the DESINE contract without incurring untenable costs and delays through having to redevelop all the systems developed under IBM's SAA. The Committee's view expressed in the Report is that the Department's commitment to IBM and more particularly to SAA, unless carefully managed, would leave it with no easy path to open systems and other vendors' solutions. The Committee found that while the Department set out with a clear intention to support international standards the outcome of the tendering process left it with an unsatisfactory solution. The Committee also found the inclusion of a sole supplier clause in the DESINE contract to have been unsatisfactory and recommended that:

- no future Commonwealth information technology acquisition contract contain a sole supplier clause; and
- no future information technology acquisition contract be written in such a way that a sole supplier could eventuate.

2.36 The Committee considered that the achievements of SSRP have not been encouraging. Progress has been slow and the Project has continued to slip behind schedule. The assessment made by the Committee was that the slippage was to a large extent the result of poor administration and management of the Project at a global level.

2.37 An integral part of SSRP is the development of a common core approach, that is the development of a single computer-based system to satisfy the core supply requirements of all three Services. The Committee considered that this approach had had a major impact on the progress of SSRP. While the approach has potential for considerable cost saving, the Committee believed that it imposed a level of complexity on the Project which would not otherwise have existed. The Committee was therefore not convinced that the common core approach is best for Defence.

2.38 The Committee recommended that the Department of Administrative Services review and where necessary revise the tendering procedures for major information technology acquisitions systems to ensure that requirements as stated in the tender are reflected in the final contract. The Committee also recommended that all departmental annual reports include a detailed listing of current information technology assets. This recommendation stemmed from the fact that became evident during the Inquiry, that billions of dollars are spent on information technology by the Commonwealth each year but very little is known about the equipment and systems owned by Commonwealth departments. The Committee also recommended that Commonwealth agencies adopt a two-stage tendering process for all information technology projects.

Report 318 - Public Sector Research and Development: Volume 1 of a Report on Research and Development

2.39 In September 1989, the Sixteenth Committee responded to public concerns over the funding and conduct of the national research effort by embarking on an inquiry into publicly performed research and development (R&D), with particular reference to:

- its contribution to Australian development;
- the adequacy of current funding levels; and
- the cost-effectiveness and efficiency of the use of those funds.

2.40 Following the 1990 Federal election, the Seventeenth Committee identified emerging concerns over the failure to utilise the excellent research conducted in Australia for the nation's industrial development and economic advancement. The Committee resolved to extend the Inquiry's terms of reference to include a review of the Commonwealth's support for private sector investment in R&D, particularly its efficiency and effectiveness.

2.41 Report 318, which was tabled on 25 June 1992, is the first part of the Committee's report on the Inquiry and deals with some of the general issues relating to research and its development and commercialisation and with the Government's support for R&D in the public sector. The crucial point in considering the contribution of R&D to the nation is its interrelatedness with many other facets of national endeavour and the policies determining them. The education system must deliver adequately trained personnel to carry out and manage the research effort and a sufficiently scientifically literate population to understand and exploit the results of research for economic advantage; accommodation and equipment commensurate with the pursuit of sophisticated research must be provided; and research must be an integral part of the industrial process if it is to contribute to the maximum commercially.

2.42 At a time of economic restraint, there is an urgent need for a systematic means of determining priorities both for the national research effort and the development of the research programs of individual research organisations. This in turn requires adequate data on which decisions can be based and which, in many cases, are lacking. The Committee identified two significant general principles for use in planning:

- it is essential that the nation's capacity for long-term basic research be maintained; and
- the public sector research organisations should not be involved in research which the private sector could perform for economic benefit but should concentrate on long-term and public-good research.

2.43 The commercial use of research carried out by public sector research organisations requires the building and strengthening of linkages between them and industry. Making better use of the public sector's research expertise also requires knowledge of the costs of commercialisation so that appropriate vehicles for commercialising research can be selected. In addition, it is necessary to ensure an adequate return on the Government's investment in research, for example, by charging the full cost of carrying out contract research.

2.44 The general issues outlined in the previous paragraphs were the subject of 50 recommendations by the Committee. In addition, the Committee examined five public sector research organisations in detail: CSIRO, the Defence Science and Technology Organisation, the Australian Nuclear Science and Technology Organisation (ANSTO), the Australian Institute of Marine Science and the Bureau of Mineral Resources. A number of common themes emerged from the evidence provided to the Committee by these organisations. They included a shortage of funds for capital works, staffing difficulties, the impact of the efficiency dividend and the requirement to seek funds from external sources, and the inappropriateness of annual and even triennial funding regimes for organisations with long-term programs. Important recommendations arising from the work of ANSTO related to the provision of a nuclear waste repository, regular inspections of ANSTO's reactors and research on radioactive waste management.

Chapter 3

INQUIRIES IN PROGRESS

3.1 This chapter provides a brief description of the inquiries being conducted by the Committee as at 30 June 1992. An account is given of the status of each inquiry, together with an overview of the issues which have arisen thus far.

Research and Development

3.2 The first volume of the Committee's Report on Research and Development was tabled on 25 June 1992. It covered a number of general issues relating to research and its development and commercialisation and the Government's support of public sector research. Volume 2, which is expected to be tabled during the Budget Session of 1992, will deal with the Committee's second term of reference, the Commonwealth's support for the private sector's investment in R&D.

3.3 The background to this part of the Committee's Inquiry is the need for Australia to combat its current account deficit by reducing imports and increasing exports of value-added and sophisticated manufactured goods. With its well-developed capacity for research, Australia should be in a good position to achieve improved performance but this has not proved to be the case.

3.4 Evidence provided to the Committee and a number of recently published reports have identified some of the significant impediments to the process of innovation, in which research is taken to marketable product, process or service. They exist in the taxation regime, the lack of available capital especially to small and medium-sized businesses, the generally small size of Australian firms, insufficient management and marketing skills and inadequate recognition at the corporate level of the need for innovation as a means of developing and maintaining a competitive position.

3.5 A range of government programs have been established to support different stages in taking research to the market. They include stimulation of investment in R & D through taxation measures, grants for precompetitive research such as the Generic Technology Grants Scheme, building linkages between researchers and industry through Cooperative Research Centres and programs such as the National Teaching Company Scheme and between industry and large government customers for trialing and demonstration purposes, and assistance in developing management and marketing skills by tertiary institutions and the National Industry Extension Service.

3.6 The Committee will examine these programs from the point of view of their contribution to overcoming the existing impediments to the commercialisation of research. Such an evaluation depends on the availability of data on program performance and the appropriateness of the data collected will be a focus for the Committee's consideration. The administration of the suite of government programs is also an important point for scrutiny, as is the most suitable balance between different types of support to produce maximum effect.

Midford Paramount Case and Related Matters

3.7 The Inquiry into the Midford Paramount Case and Related Matters was referred to the Committee by the Senate on 5 December 1990.

3.8 The Inquiry arose following the withdrawal by the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) of Crimes Act charges against the shirt importer and manufacturer, Midford Paramount Pty Ltd. The directors of Midford Paramount and a consultant had been charged with conspiring to defraud the Commonwealth of approximately $4.5m in Customs duties.

3.9 The terms of reference from the Senate require the Committee to inquire and report on the following matters:

- (a) the cost to the Commonwealth, amounting to more than $1m, of the actions of the Department of Industry, Technology and Commerce and the Australian Customs Service in fulfilling their administrative responsibilities in the handling of the failed prosecution of Midford Paramount Pty Ltd;
- (b) the methods of operation of the Australian Customs Service in preparation and conduct of prosecutions and settlements and, in particular, their actions throughout the preparation, prosecution and settlement of the Midford Paramount Pty Ltd case, including the reasons for the Director of Public Prosecutions' discontinuance of the prosecution;

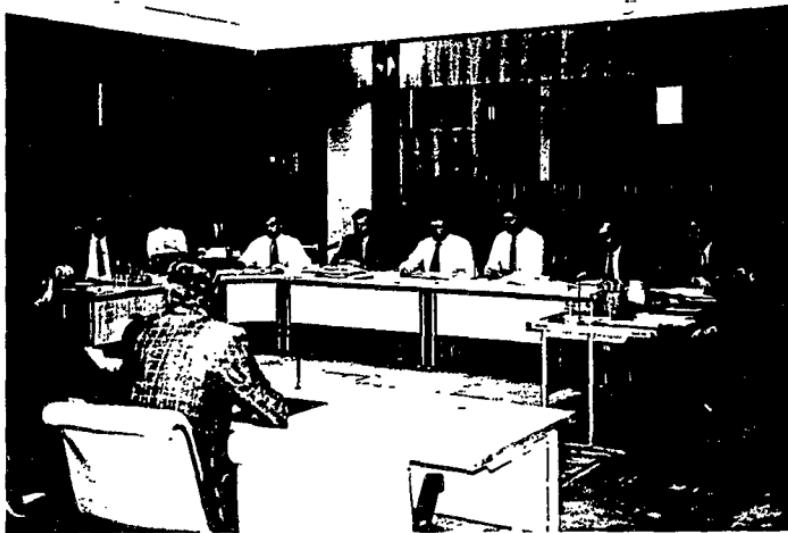

- (c) the practice, propriety and method of the Australian Customs Service of gathering evidence for prosecutions and dealing with the public in the course of such investigations;
- (d) the actions of the Minister for Industry, Technology and Commerce and successive Ministers responsible for Customs in addressing the propriety of administrative actions within the Industry, Technology and Commerce portfolio and the Australian Customs Service, in particular; and
- (e) the need for effective definition of the lines of ministerial control of the Australian Customs Service and, in particular, the actions of the Minister for Industry, Technology and Commerce in overseeing successive Ministers responsible for Customs in relation to the operations of the Australian Customs Service.

3.10 Up to the end of June 1992 the Committee received 111 public submissions and a significant number of confidential submissions. On 8 August 1991 the first public hearing was held, the delay having resulted from a request from the Director of Public Prosecutions who argued that media coverage of the proceedings might prejudice another matter before the courts. Twelve hearings had been conducted at the end of June 1992. The delays in receiving evidence and the complexity of the Inquiry led to the Senate granting an extension of the reporting date to 20 August 1992.

Review of the Independent Auditor

3.11 In June 1991, the Committee commenced a review of the Independent Auditor of the ANAO. The Independent Auditor is appointed under the Audit Act 1901 to carry out audits of the ANAO's accounts, records and financial statements, as well as efficiency audits of its operations. Since the establishment of the position in 1979, two Independent Auditors have been appointed, both from the private sector.

3.12 The Committee's review is a broad-ranging one, focussing on the role and work of the Independent Auditor. The Committee received 16 submissions from Commonwealth Government departments, private accountants and State Auditors-General. Overseas contributions came from Canada, New Zealand and the United Kingdom. The Committee subsequently took evidence at a public hearing in Canberra on 8 May 1992.

Public hearing held on 8 May 1992 as part of the Review of the Independent Auditor

Review of Auditor-General's Reports

3.13 One of the statutory duties of the Committee is to examine all reports of the Auditor-General, including efficiency audit reports. Since the establishment in 1987 of the comprehensive system of general purpose standing committees of the House of Representatives, efficiency audit reports have sometimes been referred to the relevant committee for examination. Where these reports have not been referred to another committee, the Joint Committee of Public Accounts has continued its traditional scrutiny role. Work on reviewing a number of Auditor-General's reports continues.

Australian Taxation Office

3.14 In November 1991, the Committee resolved that it would conduct an inquiry into the administrative procedures of the Australian Taxation Office. The Inquiry was advertised nationally on 8-9 February 1992 and invitations to lodge written submissions were provided to all interested community and professional organisations. By 30 June 1992, the Committee had received 58 written submissions, undertaken inspections of the Taxation Office's National, Adelaide and Parramatta offices and conducted formal public hearings in Canberra and Adelaide.

3.15 The Terms of Reference for this Inquiry illustrate the breadth of the subject under investigation:

To inquire into and report on the administrative procedures adopted by the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) in the collection of taxation revenues pursuant to the Income Tax Assessment Act 1936-1991, with particular reference to :

- the administrative and operational structures of the ATO and the application of common standards of practice across Australia;
- the efficiency and effectiveness of self assessment;
- the authority and application of taxation rulings;
- the use of information technology within the ATO; and
- the resources of the ATO and their allocation.

3.16 The efficiency of the Australian Taxation Office in collecting taxation revenues plays a significant role in the economic stability of the Australian economy and because of this, the Inquiry is regarded as one of the more important undertaken by the Committee in recent times.

3.17 The Committee previously examined the Taxation Office in 1987 when it inquired into a proposal to re-equip and redevelop the computer environment of the Office. The Committee's report on that inquiry, Report 287, has formed a useful background for the Committee's consideration of the Taxation Office's modernisation program, which is intended to equip the Office into the 21st century.

Human Resource Management

3.18 The Committee identified the need for this Inquiry in recognition of two factors; one was the extensive legislative and administrative changes which have occurred in the management of the Australian Public Service (APS) in the previous decade. The other factor was the Committee's conviction that the future productivity of the APS would depend to a large degree on the quality and commitment of the staff of the APS and their ability to implement and/or adapt to these changes.

3.19 The Committee's purpose in conducting this Inquiry was to assess the impact of the reforms, in particular those associated with the abolition of the Public Service Board as the central human resource management agency for the APS and the decentralisation of its functions to a number of other coordinating agencies and line departments.

3.20 The current emphasis on decentralisation of central agency functions and devolution of management practices to departments and agencies has created a changed climate. Agencies have had more opportunity to manage and to achieve the satisfaction which accompanies improved efficiency whilst providing improved job satisfaction for staff and improved client satisfaction in terms of service delivery. At the same time, agencies have not had the support of a single central agency for direction and guidance to facilitate this approach. Consequently the APS has been faced with the dilemmas of preserving fundamental APS principles in a climate of devolution and diversity whilst at the same time recognising the value of devolution and diversity and facilitating its implementation.

3.21 The Committee resolved to undertake the Inquiry on 9 October 1991 and agreed on the following terms of reference:

To inquire into the efficiency and effectiveness of management of human resources in the Australian Public Service with particular reference to:

- recruitment and staff career development;
- the effects of corporate restructuring and general rationalisation on human resources;
- professional training and development; and
- the Senior Executive Service.

3.22 In January 1992 the Inquiry was advertised in the national press inviting submissions. Interested parties in both the private and public sectors were also contacted and invited to lodge submissions by 13 March 1992. Because of the interest generated in the Inquiry, the Committee extended the date by which submissions would be received to allow all parties the maximum opportunity to contribute and respond to matters raised. As of 30 June 1992, 78 submissions had been received.

3.23 The issue of human resource management in the public sector generally has been a major focus for conferences and seminars this year. For example, the Chairman delivered the keynote address to an AIC conference on 'Human Resource Management in the Public Sector' in Sydney in June.

3.24 In addition, the Committee is particularly anxious to obtain the views of public servants and for this reason is planning to hold a seminar in July 1992. The seminar is to be co-hosted by the Royal Institute of Public Administration, Australia (ACT Division) and is scheduled to be held on 22 July 1992 at Parliament House.

3.25 Prior to the commencement of public hearings, the Committee is being briefed by staff from the Public Service Commission, who also facilitated an inspection of their premises. Hearings are to commence in July, with the report due to be tabled in December 1992.

Chapter 4

OTHER ACTIVITIES OF THE COMMITTEE

4.1 In addition to its inquiry workload, the Committee engaged in a number of other activities during the year. This chapter gives a brief overview of those activities.

Conferences

4.2 Throughout the year, the Chairman and other members of the Committee received numerous requests to speak on the role and work of the Committee, current inquiries and matters related to the work of the Committee. Where possible these requests were accepted. Some of the speaking engagements included:

Financial Management Reforms and Accountability

4.3 On 7 November 1992 the Chairman addressed the Public Sector Accountants Committee of the ACT Division of the Australian Society of Certified Practising Accountants.

4.4 The Chairman commented in his address on the information being provided to the Parliament and how with the introduction of program budgeting and program management there has been a greater emphasis given to reporting information on performance. He noted that the information being provided to Parliament still needs to be refined.

4.5 Other issues covered included the running costs system, the training/education to be undertaken, devolution and the attitude change in respect of interdepartmental charging for the provision of goods and services.

Annual Reporting in the Public Sector

4.6 On 29 November 1991 the Chairman spoke at an IIR Conference on Annual Reporting in the Public Sector held in Sydney. The title of his speech was 'Organisational Accountability and Annual Reports'.

4.7 He spoke with particular reference to the Committee's Reports 299, 304 and 309 which deal with various aspects of annual reporting. One of the main points made in this speech was the importance of having a well-informed Parliament as part of the democratic process and thus having comprehensive annual reports of the activities of government agencies.

Accountability in the Public Sector

4.8 On 31 March 1992 Senator Bronwyn Bishop addressed the ACT Division of the Australian Society of Certified Practising Accountants on the subject of 'Accountability in the Public Sector'.

4.9 Senator Bishop stated that the counterbalance to efficiency within the Public Service is the need to strike the proper level of accountability. It was her view that a direct link between the Public Service and the Parliament only served to enhance the proper relationship between the Government of the day and the Public Service.

4.10 Senator Bishop's address provided a critique of the Exposure Draft on Accountability prepared by the Management Improvement Advisory Committee. She drew upon arguments put forward by the Auditor-General, Mr John Taylor, AO, and said that the Executive should be subject to outside scrutiny. It is regrettable that the Exposure Draft detracted from the roles of the Auditor-General and the Parliament in the accountability process and seemed to accept the Executive as the head of the accountability pyramid.

Social Responsibilities of Commonwealth Statutory Authorities and Government Business Enterprises

4.11 On 3 April 1992 the Chairman presented the keynote address to a Conference on Meeting the Challenge of User Pays and Community Service Obligations. His address focussed on the findings of the Committee's Inquiry into the Social Responsibilities of Commonwealth Statutory Authorities and Government Business Enterprises.

4.12 The issues covered by the Chairman included the definition of the term 'social responsibility', corporate citizenship, measuring the performance of social responsibilities, and valuing and promoting socially responsible behaviour. He concluded by stating that the Inquiry into Social Responsibilities was part of the Committee's push to maintain and enhance the accountability of government bodies to the Parliament.

The Public Accounts Committee and Auditors

4.13 On 26 May the Vice Chairman, Senator John Watson, addressed a Conference on 'Practical Issues in Public Sector Auditing'. The topic of his address was 'The Public Accounts Committee and Auditors'.

4.14 Senator Watson commenced his address by restating that the Committee is a revered and pre-eminent committee of the Parliament and gave a brief overview of the Committee's role, method of operation and powers. He then set out the means by which the Committee links itself to both external and internal auditors in the Commonwealth public sector. In effect this is achieved through formal and informal meetings and by the inquiries established by the Committee into areas of concern to auditors. Senator Watson provided an overview of the Committee's then current Review of the Independent Auditor and some of the issues raised in the Committee's Report 296, The Auditor-General: Ally of the People and the Parliament.

Strategic Human Resource Management in the Public Sector

4.15 Following the announcement of the Committee's Inquiry into Human Resource Management in the Australian Public Service the Chairman received numerous requests to speak on the subject of Human Resource Management. On 17 June 1992 he presented a keynote address to a Conference on Strategic Human Resource Management in the Public Sector. The title of his address was 'Effectiveness and Efficiency of the Management of Human Resources in the APS'.

4.16 The Chairman provided an overview of the numerous changes in the human resources area that had occurred at the Commonwealth level and explained that the Committee's Inquiry arose out of a realisation that the future productivity of the Public Service will to a large degree depend on the quality and commitment of the staff of the Australian Public Service. A critical factor in achieving maximum productivity is the way in which the human resources of the Public Service are managed, particularly in a rapidly changing environment.

4.17 The Chairman then addressed the four terms of reference for the Inquiry: recruitment and staff career development, corporate restructuring and rationalisation, professional training and development, and the Senior Executive Service.

Australian Accounting Research Foundation

4.18 During the year members of the Committee maintained contact with professional bodies such as the Australian Accounting Research Foundation.

4.19 A focus of this contact was a lunchtime meeting on 22 May 1992 organised by members of the Public Sector Accounting Standards Board of the Australian Accounting Research Foundation. This meeting was attended by members and staff of the Foundation, the Committee and Senate Standing Committee on Finance and Public Administration. The gathering provided an opportunity for open discussion about a range of public sector accounting issues, in particular accountability and accrual accounting.

4.20 During 1991-92 the Foundation issued its Exposure Draft 55, Financial Reporting by Government Departments. The Committee viewed the Exposure Draft as an attempt to improve the relevance and reliability of government financial information and prepared a submission to the Foundation setting out its views.

Australasian Council of Public Accounts Committees

4.21 The Australasian Council of Public Accounts Committees did not meet during the 1991-92 financial year. However, contact between member committees and their respective secretariats continued on an informal basis. During the latter part of the year, the Committee was finalising arrangements for the Mid-Term Meeting of the Council to be held in Canberra on 21 July 1992.

Chapter 5

ISSUES ARISING FROM THE COMMITTEE'S ACTIVITIES

5.1 This chapter highlights a number of matters which relate to the work of the Committee and which the Committee considers warrant mention.

Publication of Evidence by Sectional Committees

5.2 The issue of publication of evidence by the Committee's sectional committees was presented in the Committee's Report 298, Report of Activities July 1988-June 1989, Report 307, Activities 1989-90 and again last year in Report 311, Activities 1990-91.

5.3 All three reports referred to the issue of the protection offered to publishers of evidence given to sectional committees. To date the matter remains unresolved and for the benefit of those interested in this matter the text from Report 311 explaining the issue is reproduced below in paragraphs 5.4-5.11.

5.4 The Committee had been advised by the Attorney-General's Department that there was some doubt about the extent to which protection was offered to persons other than Committee members, witnesses and staff of Hansard when publishing or otherwise using material which had been authorised for publication by a sectional committee, under subsection 2(2) of the Parliamentary Papers Act 1908.

5.5 There was, and is, no question that complete protection is given when evidence is authorised by the full Committee, nor is there any doubt that Committee members, witnesses and staff of Hansard are protected, as these people are classified as participants in the proceedings of Parliament and therefore fully protected by the Parliamentary Privileges Act 1987.

5.6 The issue has arisen because while the Committee, under the Public Accounts Committee Act 1951, can form sectional committees, the Act does not empower a sectional committee generally to authorise the publication of evidence. And whereas the Parliamentary Papers Act 1908 empowers a committee to authorise the publication of evidence and documents, and the publication of any evidence or document under that authority is immune from civil or criminal legal action, that Act does not apply to sub-committees.

5.7 As journalists reporting the proceedings of public hearings conducted by sectional committees are most affected by this anomaly, the Chairman has, since this discovery, made a statement at the commencement of each hearing cautioning the media to exercise care in reporting fairly and accurately.

5.8 At the same time, the Committee initiated action to rectify the problem. Agreement was sought, and received, from the Attorney-General to amend the definition of 'Committee' in the Parliamentary Papers Act 1908 so as to include sub-committees or sectional committees.

5.9 However, as noted in Report 307, Activities 1989-90, in a letter dated 28 December 1989 the then Attorney-General, the Hon Lionel Bowen, MP, informed the Committee that adequate protection was conferred by section 16(2)(d) of the Parliamentary Privileges Act 1987. Notwithstanding this, he noted that a question was raised about the relationship between the Parliamentary Papers Act and the Parliamentary Privileges Act which ought to be clarified and he advised that the necessary legislation would be introduced as soon as practicable.

5.10 In June 1990, the Chairman wrote to the Attorney-General, the Hon Michael Duffy, MP, seeking urgent advice as to the timing of this legislation. Mr Duffy reiterated the comments made by his predecessor. Furthermore, he referred to aspects of the relationship of the Parliamentary Privileges Act 1987 to other related legislation which his Department would wish to consider at the same time. He concluded by saying that his Department was considering the matter 'with a view to the preparation and introduction of any necessary legislation as soon as practicable having regard to overall priorities'.

5.11 The most recent advice from the Attorney-General, following a letter from the Chairman in September 1990, is that sectional committees do not have the power to publish written or oral evidence and that, while progress has been made on resolving the relationship between the two Acts, 'having regard to available resources and other priorities it may be some time before it can be completed'.

5.12 The delay in finalising this matter remains a matter of concern to the Committee, not only in terms of the legal issue to be resolved but also now in terms of the operations of the Attorney-General's Department.

Developments in Response to Report 296

5.13 In March 1989 the Committee tabled its Report 296, The Auditor-General: Ally of the People and Parliament, which proposed a major reform of the then Australian Audit Office. The Government presented its response to the recommendations in the Report in November of that year. While in agreement with the majority of the recommendations requiring decision, the Government reserved its decision on those recommendations concerning the issues of:

- whether the Audit Office should be established as a statutory authority;
- the level of resources for the Office; and
- the mandate of the Auditor-General.

5.14 The Government then commissioned the South Australian Auditor-General, Mr Tom Sheridan, to conduct a review of the capacity of the Audit Office to improve further the use of existing resources. At the same time, the Government deferred its consideration of the issues of mandate and statutory authority status until it received the report of Mr Sheridan's review.

5.15 This review was completed in early 1990 and in December 1990 the Government announced its decision that the ANAO would not receive any funds additional to the $2m per annum increase which the Government had agreed to in its initial response to the Committee's Report. The Government's view was that initiatives already undertaken by the Auditor-General or suggested in the review could lead to significant additional resources, equivalent to 60 full-time staff, becoming available for efficiency auditing over the next two years. The Government agreed to a recommendation made by Mr Sheridan that the Office charge for its financial statement audits, including those of departments of state, and that it retain revenue from those audits.

5.16 In terms of the other two outstanding issues, the Government rejected the proposal that the Audit Office become a statutory authority but agreed that the Auditor-General should be the sole external auditor of all Commonwealth-owned or controlled entities. The Government did, however, decide that the Minister for Finance could provide exemptions to this.

5.17 Report 296 also recommended that the Audit Act 1901 be repealed and replaced by two separate acts covering audit and financial administration. This recommendation was one of the first accepted by the Government and work has commenced on the drafting of the new legislation. During the year, the Committee was briefed on the proposed content of this legislation by officers from the Department of Finance and the ANAO.

5.18 During the year the Committee reiterated to the Department of Finance its view that an audit committee of Parliament, as recommended in Report 296, should be established permanently by means of the new Auditor-General Act which the Department is responsible for drafting. The purpose of this committee would be to advise the Auditor-General on Parliament's audit priorities and to consider the Audit Office's finances in detail.

5.19 Although the Committee acknowledges the Government's response that the audit committee is a matter for the Parliament to decide, it has continued to argue that the inclusion of provision for the establishment of the committee in the forthcoming Auditor-General bill would be the most efficient way of allowing Parliament to consider the recommendation. During the year the Committee wrote to the Prime Minister on this issue. However, it now appears the Auditor-General bill will not be introduced into the Parliament until 1993 and under these circumstances the Committee is considering alternative courses of action.

Interruption to Public Hearing

5.20 On 29 May 1992 a public hearing being conducted by the Committee was briefly adjourned following continued interruption by a person observing the hearing from the public gallery. This person had made a submission to the Inquiry and demanded the right to speak while evidence was being given by an invited group of witnesses. Despite requests from the Chairman to refrain from interrupting the proceedings, the person continued to claim a right to be heard. Eventually the Chairman declared a short adjournment and attendants were asked to remove the person from the Committee Room.

5.21 This type of occurrence is rare. Nevertheless, for future inquiries the Committee will ensure that correspondence to those who have made submissions to an inquiry will clarify the status of observers in the public gallery.

Quality of Submissions

5.22 The quality of submissions is a recurring theme in the Committee's reports of its activities. In general the standard of written evidence presented to the Committee is good with some submissions being outstanding; however, there are occasions when submissions from departments are difficult to digest.

5.23 During the year there were a number of occasions when submissions were found to be nothing more than a collection of related papers, indicating that no attempt had been made to provide any real synthesis of the available information. While in certain cases this may be unavoidable, the Committee generally views this approach as unsatisfactory. Accountability depends on good quality information being presented in a clear and logical manner. Failure to present information in this way only serves to hinder the work of the Committee.

Online Evidence

5.24 The year saw the successful completion of a pilot study to assess the loading of transcripts of evidence from public hearings onto the Parliamentary Database. The pilot study was organised by the Department of the Parliamentary Reporting Staff and involved a small number of inquiries being conducted by Senate and House of Representatives Standing Committees and two inquiries being conducted by the Joint Committee of Public Accounts.

5.25 The pilot study proved to be a success and now work is proceeding towards the loading of all current inquiry hearings onto the Parliamentary Database. The advantages of this facility are significant. Not only can committees now interrogate their evidence faster and more systematically but they have the potential to complete reports in a shorter time frame as a result of having quick and ready access to their evidence.

Scrutiny by House of Representatives Standing Committees

5.26 In Report 304, Guidelines for Departmental Annual Reports, the Committee recommended that the Standing Committees of the House of Representatives be assigned the ongoing role of conducting reviews of departmental operations based upon the annual reports of departments. Similar recommendations were also made by the House of Representatives Standing Committee on Finance and Public Administration and the House of Representatives Procedure Committee. In making this recommendation the Joint Committee of Public Accounts saw that reviews by House of Representatives Standing Committees would provide an incentive for the improvement of the reports. Such reviews would also complement the well-established Senate Estimates process and give Members of the House of Representatives the opportunity to gain an insight into the operations of departments.

5.27 Sessional Order 28B was subsequently amended to state that:

Annual reports of government departments and statutory authorities tabled in the House shall stand referred to the relevant committee for any inquiry the committee may wish to make.

5.28 The Committee notes that as at 30 June 1992 Standing Committees have not sought to initiate inquiries based on annual reports or to undertake significant reviews of aspects of departmental administration.

5.29 The Committee also notes that few Standing Committees are taking the opportunity to examine reports of the Auditor-General which fall within their area of responsibility. However, this does not mean that these reports are not receiving parliamentary scrutiny as the Joint Committee of Public Accounts has a statutory responsibility to examine reports of the Auditor-General. It should be noted that as the number of Auditor-General's reports tabled continues to grow this is having a significant effect on the workload of the Committee.

Hon G F Punch, MP
Chairman
